- BUY, new MYR29.70 TP from MYR33.20, 90% upside and c.3% yield. We believe the stock is oversold despite the short-term uncertainties. With the potential short-term rush in orders and intensified reallocation from manufacturing activities, Malaysian Pacific Industries stands to benefit and will prevail in the on-going trade war situation – given its diverse customer base, value proposition, and process know-how in a competitive environment. Its current trough valuation of under 20x P/E provides investors with a great risk-reward opportunity.
- Temporary respite, uncertainties remain. The temporary pause on tariffs imposed on various semiconductor and electronic goods was a big relief for the sector in avoiding near-term demand shocks. However, a separate imposition of tariffs on chips may be on the cards, for the US to reduce its reliance on China. A policy reversal or new tariffs from both the US and China could exacerbate uncertainty over the situation.
- The positives. Malaysia's established ecosystem – with advanced infrastructure, skilled labour, competitive costs, and pro-investment policies – makes it a prime beneficiary of the intensified reallocation in manufacturing activities to ASEAN and the China Plus One strategy in the longer term. We take comfort that US multinational players' supply chains are entrenched in Malaysian. Some of these will continue to be under certain exemptions and may fare better than others in competing countries where the initial reciprocal tariff rates were far higher.
- Capex and headcount. MPI's headcount has reached an inflection point and has been rising over the past two quarters to reach 7.2k. On capex, it has been investing in technology and improving its efficiency and automation – such costs have amounted to MYR541m over the past two years despite the industry downturn. Its commitment to continue investing in technology and improving production efficiency underscores the confidence of the management team in the growth of the business.
- Pre-emptive cut. MPI's exposure to the US was at 20% based on its FY24 numbers. However, we understand that majority of its integrated circuits are not exported to the US directly, and may not be subjected to direct tariffs, if any. The impact will likely be on the potential demand disruption (higher prices of goods, poorer buyer sentiment) if the trade war persists. Given the uncertainties stemming from the ongoing trade war, we make a pre-emptive cut to MPI's FY25-27F earnings – by 13%, 8% and 6% on lower topline growth assumptions – post imputing the potential slowing in end-demand.
- Value emerging. Despite the cut in our forecasts, we see substantial upside to our TP. Hence, investor should ignore the short-term noise and position into the sector for a cyclical recovery, and strongly consider a solid company that is expected to benefit from the upcycle. Our TP drops to MYR29.70 from MYR33.20 post earnings estimates revision, reflecting an unchanged 30x CY25F P/E (+1.5SD from 5-year mean) – inclusive of a 2% ESG premium.
