- Keep BUY with higher DCF-derived MYR6.60 TP from MYR1.68, 18% upside and 1% yield. Our TP implies 16.9x FY21F P/E – a 35% discount against the sector average. 1H20 earnings beat expectations. Rubberex Corp also announced a 2-for-1 bonus issue. In view of the uptrend in COVID-19 cases, we believe that gloves ASP has increased. Consequently, we raise our RBRX earnings forecasts and TP.
- Earnings beat expectation. 1H20 core earnings of MYR32m were better than expected. Note that this makes up 213% of our FY20 full-year estimate. The earnings outperformance was due to higher-than-expected revenue – possibly caused by much better sales volumes and ASPs.
- 1H20 net income surged 1,148% YoY. 1H20 revenue increased 46% YoY to MYR154.5m, as sales volumes improved with better ASPs. In line with the better revenue and good cost controls, EBIT margins improved to 24.9% in 1H20 vis-à-vis 1H19's 6.1%.
- 2Q20 earnings improved significantly. Revenue increased 33% to MYR88.1m due to the increase in volumes with better ASPs. In line with stable costs, EBIT margins improved to 27.9% in 2Q20 vs last quarter's 10.6%. All these factors supported the company's 2Q20 net income surge (+1,191% QoQ).
- 2-for-1 bonus issue announced. The ex-date will be determined later. The corporate exercise aims to enhance the stock's trading liquidity and marketability. This exercise's expected completion date: 2H20.
- Prospects. RBRX's orderbook has been secured up to 1H21. Its next capacity expansion should commence later this year, with earnings contributions possibly seen in 4Q20. The new factory is already completed, and is now waiting for its electricity and gas supply. We expect earnings contributions from this new factory to start in October.
- BUY with a higher MYR6.60 TP. We have increased FY20F-22F earnings by 424-595% to reflect the higher ASPs – in line with industry trends. The higher TP is in line with the better earnings estimates. In the near term, we expect RBRX to register a stronger set of results in 3Q20, in line with the higher ASP trend in the industry. In the long run, RBRX is a beneficiary of the long-term uptrend in global gloves consumption.
- Risks. The biggest near-term risk is a faster-than-expected discovery of a safe and effective COVID-19 vaccine being made available globally. Our base case scenario is for ASPs to normalise in the long run once such a safe and effective vaccine is globally available. See Page 3 for details.

Our base case assumption for COVID-19 vaccine development. Our base case scenario is for a safe and effective vaccine to be made available in the US in 1H21 under an Emergency Use Authorisation. This should eventually lead to lower gloves demand in 2H21 – assuming new COVID-19 cases decline by then. As 85% of gloves demand is from the medical segment, lower COVID-19 cases should lower demand from this sector. However, it is impossible to determine if any of the vaccine candidates currently under trial will work, as even the most promising Phase 2 results can still end up as failures under Phase 3, as denoted by the US Food & Drug Administration.

We will be monitoring the progress of such vaccine developments closely, given that this is one of the potential leading indicators for lower new COVID-19 cases ahead.

The biggest risk is for a vaccine being made available in September, although this possibility looks low at this juncture. Five leading vaccine players are in Stages 2 or 3, and we think it is possible that the first dose will be available in 1H21. The vaccine players include Sinovac Biotech, Sinopharm, AstraZeneca, Moderna, and Pfizer. Based on Citeline data, we gather that these five companies aim to deliver first doses of COVID-19 vaccines with different targets, ranging between September and December.

Out of the five, which are in or about to enter Phase 3 trials, AstraZeneca aims to roll out its vaccine in September – this is the earliest date vis-à-vis its peers. CEO Pascal Soriot said the pharmaceutical giant was on track to begin rolling out up to 2bn doses of a coronavirus vaccine in September if ongoing trials prove successful.

Other risks: Higher-than-expected supply from China, lower-than-expected sales volumes, and volatile currency movements and/or raw material prices.

Earnings sensitivity to change with ASPs. For every 1% change in ASP, we expect RBRX's FY20F-22F earnings to change by 1.5-1.8% in the same direction.
